

Empower.

Cassie Wilson grew up in the small town of Walters. For college she ventured to the University of Oklahoma where she earned her degree in French. She went onto an MBA at OU as well.

Cassie thought banking would be a great career. But, her loan officer title merely consisted of taking orders from business owners for loans that would provide a quick fix to some short-term problem. She wanted to empower them to make great decisions; so, she sought a position that would enable her to consult with them on their long-range goals and help them prepare for whatever challenges they faced. She has been in the industry over 30 years and brings a wealth of knowledge from how to protect your family when you are just getting started to how to transition into retirement and how to leave an impact on your family and community with legacy planning.
