

Sarah Martin Hall, DO, is an Oklahoma native who earned her Doctor of Osteopathic Medicine degree from the Oklahoma State University College of Osteopathic Medicine in Tulsa, OK, in 2005. After graduation, she performed her family medicine internship and residency at the OSU Medical Center. While in medical school, she was a team facilitator for the OB/GYN department, a research technician for the microbiology department, a histology tutor for the anatomy and cell biology department, and a microbiology tutor in the microbiology department.

Board-certified in family medicine, Dr. Hall is a joint-appointed professor for the department of family medicine and medical education. She is also the program director of the OMECO THC family medicine residency.

In 2019, Dr. Hall decided to perform a primary care training enhancement fellowship in efforts to lead health care transformation and enhance teaching in a community-based setting.