

Stacia Shipman, DO, FACOEP, was born in Wichita, Kansas and is a graduate of the University of Kansas. She obtained her medical degree from the Oklahoma State University Center for Health Sciences in Tulsa and completed her emergency medicine residency training at INTEGRIS Southwest Medical Center in Oklahoma City, where she is currently an attending physician.

Dr. Shipman has over 14 years' experience as an emergency medicine physician, and is board certified with the American Osteopathic Board of Emergency Medicine as well as a Fellow with the American College of Osteopathic Physicians.

In addition to her emergency medicine practice, she is a Core Faculty member, teaching and training emergency residents at INTEGRIS Southwest Medical Center. She also serves as Research Director for all INTEGRIS Health Residency Programs with numerous publications and has presented at national conferences on a range of emergency medicine topics. She resides in Edmond, Oklahoma with her husband, who is also an emergency medicine physician and their 3 children.